
Facing my Return to Israel/Palestine.

by Rabbi David J. Cooper

It was only three years ago that I wrote in Kol Kehilla in regard to the 50 years since my celebration of becoming bar mitzvah. Now I'm writing that it is 50 years since I arrived in Israel as a 16-year old a few weeks after the Six Day

War. And now, this month I am leaving for Israel/Palestine just before turning 66 and I can't describe the sadness and anger I feel that a half-century has not ended the occupation that began the month I first arrived there.

I came on a teen tour – as did my siblings when they turned 16. I had been a member of a left socialist-Zionist youth group, Hashomer Hatzair. My family were liberal Zionists. I was a high school activist against the Vietnam War. In April, a few weeks before leaving on the trip, I marched in Manhattan in the same anti-war procession as Martin Luther King, Jr., just a week after his famous Riverside Church speech.

In May, Egyptian president Nasser required the UN to remove its buffer forces between Israel and the Egyptian military on the Sinai Peninsula. It became clear that there would be a war with Egypt and probably with Jordan and Syria as well. Many of us were very scared that this would be the end of Israel. So it was with great relief that the war that did commence ended in less than a week without the destruction of Israel. My trip had been cancelled with the prospect of war, but was un-cancelled a few days after in its wake. And so, within a month I was walking in Jerusalem.

In Hebrew day school I had learned that after the 1948 war, Jews were not able to go to the Western Wall. But now the Old City was open to tourists. In the synagogues where I grew up, there were photos and paintings of the wall. They showed a narrow street, more like an alley, with the wall on one side and houses facing the wall on the other. Men and women – without a dividing mechitza – prayed privately facing the wall.

But that is not what I saw when I got there. A mechitza now separated the men and the women. But that was not the main difference. Where there had been houses in the old photos, the wall now faced an open area. I was puzzled. I turned to the Israeli tour guide and asked if the Jordanians had torn down the neighborhood facing the wall sometime since 1948. No, he replied, "We did it, last week." And then I asked the same question that as teenager I asked when I learned about urban renewal in New York. "What happened to the people who lived here?" He looked at me somewhat surprised and said, "What does that matter?"

Well it mattered to me. It still does.

So I'm heading to Israel/Palestine. For about ten days I'll be on the Israeli side of the Green Line with friends, and also exploring places that a Kehilla trip might go to. Then for another ten days I'll cross the line with the Center for Jewish NonViolence to engage with Palestinians there to better understand the reality of occupation as that they have experienced for five decades.

And now, as I consider that soon I'll cross through the barrier wall into Bethlehem, I recall how in the summer of '67 we were told that we should hurry to see some of the sights in the West Bank such as Bethlehem and Jericho, after all people said, they would soon be returned as bargaining chips for peace. When I learned a year later that Israeli civilians were moving into settlements in the West Bank I asked myself, "What about the bargaining chip thing. What about peace?"

I'm still wondering.

Isaac: Blindness and Blessing

Isaac survives the Akeda – his Binding on an altar; he marries and fathers children. But what does it mean to survive death? In midrashic tradition, the trauma of the Binding induces in him a delayed blindness. With the help of midrashic, psychoanalytic and literary sources, we will explore the enigma of Isaac's survival, and the ways this experience shapes his blind blessing of Jacob.

Dr. Zornberg is a scholar of English literature and of Torah and rabbinic literature. She weaves together ancient and modern perspectives to bring sacred texts to life. She is the author of several extraordinary books.

The History of Love

by Nicole Krauss

A long-lost book reappears, mysteriously connecting an old man searching for his son and a girl seeking a cure for her widowed mother's loneliness.

Leo Gursky taps his radiator each evening to let his upstairs neighbor know he's still alive. But it wasn't always like this: in the Polish village of his youth, he fell in love and wrote a book...Sixty years later and half a world away, fourteen-year-old Alma, who was named after a character in that book, undertakes an adventure to find her namesake and save her family.

Paying this tax is a way to honor the Ohlone ancestors and current residents who are an intimate part of the land we now call home.

The Shuumi Land Tax directly supports the Sogorea Te Land Trust's work to acquire and preserve land, establish a cemetery to reinter stolen Ohlone ancestral remains and build a community center and round house so current and future generations of Indigenous people can thrive in the Bay Area.

On the Origins of Kehilla

by Rabbi Burt Jacobson

*Note: This is the twelfth of an ongoing series of personal essays on the beginnings of Kehilla. Each article shares the origins of one or more of the ideals and/or values that motivated me to start Kehilla. The essays are adapted from the manuscript of the book I have now completed, There is Only One Love: The Ba'al Shem Tov in the Modern World.

World Peace

It was the early 1980s and the world was on fire. The governments of Guatemala and El Salvador were persecuting their own citizens in horrific ways. And President Reagan was openly backing the Contra rebels against the popular Marxist Sandinista government in Nicaragua. Four million drought victims in Ethiopia desperately needed humanitarian aid. The Israeli-Palestinian conflict was raging. Israel had invaded Lebanon in 1982 and, with the complicity of Ariel Sharon, Israel's defense minister; Phalangist Christian forces had entered two Palestinian refugee camps, slaughtering the occupants. The following year a public inquiry by the Israeli government found Sharon personally responsible for the massacres.

Soon after Ronald Reagan was elected in 1980, he began rattling his saber at the "evil empire," the Soviet Union. He was actively advocating for the development of his bizarre "Star Wars" anti-ballistic missile system, which would be located in space. Many of us were afraid that the president might instigate a nuclear confrontation with the Soviet Union.

Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory—one of the two facilities that were designing America's nuclear arsenal—is located less than forty miles from Oakland, where my first wife, Jonika Mountainfire, and I were living. Jonika decided to become an anti-nuclear activist and invited me to join her. We underwent non-violence training through the Livermore Action Group and we engaged in the frequent protests at the Lab, marching onto government property, getting arrested and being sent to the Santa Rita prison. There, we would organize the Jewish protestors and lead them in prayer and ritual. We once conducted a Passover seder outside of the Livermore Lab. The following year I received official permission to conduct a seder for sixty women—Jewish and Non-Jewish—who were being held in the county jail for trespassing onto government property.

Jonika and I decided to start a Jewish protest organization that we called Shomrei Shalom: the Jewish Anti-Nuclear Coalition of the Bay. We helped organize demonstrations and we marched with signs that read "Jews Against the Bomb," and "No Nuclear Holocaust!" I spoke in public venues about the Jewish value of peacemaking and about the necessity of halting the nuclear buildup, drawing on Abraham Heschel's writings about the danger of nuclear war.

Many progressives were terribly scared that Reagan might win a second term in 1984. The members of Shomrei Shalom decided that they needed to put all of their activist energy into defeating the incumbent president and electing the democratic candidate, Walter Mondale. This was a real dilemma for me. I felt that we needed to continue our struggle against the government's preparation for nuclear war. Nevertheless, the coalition fell apart.

Of course, Reagan won the election, carrying forty-nine states. As I thought about what had occurred it seemed to me that political organizations that were based on single issues would have a difficult time sustaining themselves in for the long haul. This was another reason to establish a politically progressive synagogue, a congregation that would be dedicated to spiritual and moral ideals.

Daniel Ellsberg is an American activist and former United States military analyst who, while employed by the Rand Corporation, precipitated a national political controversy in 1971 when he released the Pentagon Papers, a top-secret Pentagon study of U.S. government decision-making in relation to the Vietnam War, to The New York Times and other newspapers. I met Dan in the county jail where we were both incarcerated for trespassing onto the grounds of the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory.

The first Kehilla High Holy Day services took place in the Fall of 1983. I invited Dan Ellsberg to speak on Yom Kippur day. He agreed, but he was unable to do so because he had to be in Germany for disarmament discussions. But Dan's wife, Patricia, gave a very inspirational talk.

I had sign-up sheets at the door of those High Holy Day services for people who were interested in the creation of a spiritually-oriented, politically progressive synagogue. The energy I had put into anti-nuclear activism now went to creating a vision for Kehilla Community Synagogue. The first meeting of interested folks met in June of 1984.

Shavuot All-Nighter!! "Tikkun Leyl Shavuot" Tuesday-Wednesday, May 30-31 6pm-7am!

A community-wide all night event where a rainbow of different Jewish groups from Orthodox to Renewal gather for an entire night of simultaneous 45-minute study sessions (almost none require any Hebrew) with many many different teachers across the spectrum. Rabbi David and Rabbi Burt teach there every year.

Traditionally, the holiday of Shavuot was celebrated by an all-night vigil where the participants studied together until the time of morning prayers. 28 years ago, most of the East Bay synagogues, along with Jewish schools and university programs began this annual program that starts this year at 6:00pm on Tuesday night and ends at 7:00am on Wednesday morning. A variety of classes and workshops are available every hour, and coffee, tea and snacks are available all-night.

This is a unique program that is not duplicated (as yet) anywhere in the world and here it is available in our own backyard.

There are special sessions for teens (who also participate in the adult stuff too).

Childcare: Parents must provide bedding and pre-register their child(ren) online by Thursday, May 25th.

For more information and to register go to the Kehilla website calendar.
